Students on this project will research and explore the history of card and board games, discover the rules of the most ancient Arabic and Chinese games, the development of poker and chess, and gambling in all its forms (from blood sports, gambling machines, to horse racing) through the ages. This will include historical and contemporary social problems ranging from addiction to organized crime.

While students will have the opportunity to play games they will also have to research and produce a final product, in English, of their choice. Options include photo, oral, a live casino museum, or something else creative and interactive.
